What is AARC?

The Association for Assessment and Research in Counseling is an organization of counselors, educators, and other professionals that advances the counseling profession by promoting best practices in assessment, research, and evaluation in counseling.

Who Joins AARC?

AARC members use assessment, research, and evaluation in their work. Our organization includes students, counselors, and educators from a variety of settings including schools, colleges, universities, rehabilitation centers, community agencies, and government agencies. Our members are committed to using assessment results accurately and fairly and to promoting best practices in counseling research and evaluation.

Whether you are an experienced or emerging test developer, researcher, or practitioner, AARC is for you.

Members have access to standards, research best practice documents and tutorials, and reports on assessment via its website: http://www.aarc-counseling.org
